

ABSTRACT

A novel simulator, simulation method, and recording media are presented in order to correctly simulate a large-scale and complex molecular process in a biological system at a higher speed than any other proposed method. This method divides a biological system, which can be described by chemical reaction formulas, into two phases: the binding and reaction phases, which the inventor names the two-phase partition method.

10